Your Purpose Emerges

When women are crushed, who wins?

Good question.

Looking around our world today you can see that there is an overwhelming amount of situations that are bringing harm and even death to those in physical body suits. And just like in the Galactic worlds, there are words to justify these situations. Rape? She dressed or moved provocatively. War? There are bad guys who want to harm us. GMO foods? We have to increase our food production. Poor education? It is the parent's fault or the teacher's fault or the students are not smart enough.

Without anyone on duty to vigilantly identify any energy, idea, system project, manifestation that brings harm into the Web of Life.

With no immune system, deterioration begins and then death occurs.

The Entire Web of Life
Suffers

Would any of this destruction been allowed to exist in our world, to bring harm to the children, to turn one mother's children against another mother's children if the Souls in Female body suits had been heard, nurtured, strengthened and seen as visionaries?

If mothers were setting policy about the foods for their children, would there be toxic chemicals in those foods?

If grandmothers were designing a culture for the future generations would they create an education system that dumbed down and discounted the ability of the students?

If the true agenda for settling differences was to listen so deeply as to vicariously experience the Other in order to find the common ground of respect, kindness and generosity would there be military machines?

Who is winning? Or who appears to be winning?

Not the Divine agendas of Good. Most certainly the Outsider agenda of domination, control, greed and usury.

All of this is what has happened because the mission of Female as Leader, as Designer of Cultures, as sensitive identifier and commander of authority was/is targeted for destruction.

What we see in our world is result of losing Female Mission, vision, wisdom, collaborative circles and voice.

What is Yours to Do?
